

Boxes, figures and tables

Figure 2.1 Tracking the process: Wheel of social alignments	31
Figure 5.1 The main building blocks of a social research process.	80
Figure 5.2 The reality domains of critical realism	83
Figure 7.1 Integrating restorative, deterrent and incapacitative justice	120
Figure 7.2 Drahos-esque networked escalation.	123
Figure 8.1 Enforcement pyramid	136
Box 8.1 Policy instrument categories.	140
Figure 13.1 The Nielsen–Parker holistic compliance model	220
Table 13.1 The 14 compliance questions	221
Figure 16.1 Simplified model of the United Kingdom’s shift from welfare state to regulatory state.	269
Figure 16.2 Enforcement pyramid under the Irish Consumer Protection Act 2007	272
Table 17.1 Regulatory capitalism as a variegated approach.	297
Figure 27.1 The global dynamics of violence, 1955–2002: Mass atrocities and deaths.	469
Table 27.1 Violent Societies Index: Top 20 countries, 2000–2012.	470
Figure 29.1 Rhinoceros poaching statistics, South Africa	503
Table 29.1 Mechanisms used to facilitate community coproduction	507
Figure 30.1 Example of a redirection link ‘waterhole’ attack.	521
Figure 32.1 Logic model of public health law research	557

Figure 32.2 Law in the theory of planned behaviour	561
Figure 32.3 Procedural justice and compliance	563
Box 33.1 Lessons from Doha	583
Figure 34.1 Patients as actors on a responsive regulation pyramid. . .	594
Figure 34.2 The salutary threat of litigation.	604
Table 37.1 Jurisdictions with tax havens, offshore/international finance centres and/or specialist financial products, services and/or incentives.	659
Table 37.2 Risks to revenue collection due to tax havens and OFCs/IFCs	664

This text is taken from Regulatory Theory: Foundations and applications, edited by Peter Drahos, published 2017 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.