

Figures

Figure 2.1 Bulk freight task by mode (billion tonne kilometres)	15
Figure 2.2 Non-bulk freight task by mode (billion tonne kilometres) . .	15
Figure 2.3 Road and rail infrastructure expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product (GDP)	24
Figure 2.4 Total public sector road-related revenue in Australia (2015 prices)	25
Figure 2.5 State and territory road-related revenue by type (2015 prices)	25
Figure 2.6 Commonwealth road-related revenue by type (2015 prices)	26
Figure 2.7 Total public sector road-related expenditure for Australia (2015 prices)	26
Figure 2.8 Total Commonwealth road-related expenditure (2015 prices)	27
Figure 2.9 Total state and territory government road-related expenditure (2015 prices)	27
Figure 2.10 Total local government road-related expenditure (2015 prices)	28
Figure 3.1 Domestic passenger travel per capita	49
Figure 3.2 Government spending on transport infrastructure	50
Figure 3.3 State and territory depreciation and interest costs	51
Figure 3.4 Impact of ride-sharing on taxi revenue and licence values . .	56
Figure 3.5 Economic returns of smaller schemes compared with larger schemes (projects submitted to Infrastructure Australia)	57

Figure 3.6 International comparison of Australia's investment in transport infrastructure	59
Figure 3.7 International comparison of Australia's maintenance expenditure on transport infrastructure	59
Figure 4.1 Australia's projected population growth to 2061	65
Figure 4.2 Projected population growth in Australian capital cities to 2061	66
Figure 5.1 Public bus and rail usage	75
Figure 5.2 Mode sharing versus private vehicle use	75
Figure 5.3 An integrated hub-and-spoke network.	77
Figure 5.4 Ownership restraint: Vehicle quota system.	82
Figure 5.5 Spatial and temporal flexibility in Electronic Road Pricing . .	82
Figure 5.6 Determining speed ranges	83
Figure 5.7 Effectiveness of Area Licensing Scheme and Electronic Road Pricing	84
Figure 6.1 Marginal cost pricing.	91
Figure 6.2 Marginal cost pricing may produce a socially wasteful outcome	92
Figure 6.3 Average cost pricing.	92
Figure 6.4 Average cost pricing: Which average cost?	93
Figure 6.5 Average cost pricing: Existence?	94
Figure 6.6 Congestion pricing	95
Figure 6.7 Example 1: Incomplete congestion charging	97
Figure 6.8 Example 2: Interaction with labour taxes	98
Figure 6.9 Social costs of poor traffic demand forecasting performance	99
Figure 6.10 Congestion charging as a pure revenue-raising device . .	101
Figure 7.1 Variable tolling in 1863	104
Figure 7.2 Fuel excise as a proportion of gross domestic product (GDP)	108

Figure 7.3 There is no link between revenue and investment 109

Figure 7.4 Avatars representing different road user profiles 115

Figure 8.1 Map of Auckland showing major road networks 123

Figure 8.2 Funding gap: $300 million per annum over 30 years. 124

Figure 8.3 Two transport options 129

Figure 8.4 Annual passenger transport boardings 130

Figure 8.5 Average AM peak speed on the strategic freight network . . 131

Figure 8.6 Percentage of AM peak spent in severe congestion
on the strategic freight network 131

Figure 8.7 Percentage of inter-peak spent in severe congestion
on the strategic freight network 132

Figure 8.8 Submissions relating to the proposed networks 133

Figure 8.9 Submissions relating to proposed funding options. 134

This text is taken from Road Pricing and Provision: Changed Traffic Conditions Ahead, edited by Michael de Percy and John Wanna, published 2018 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.