

It has seemed, in the beginning, a bold venture for a group of undergraduates—even in Melbourne, where the History school was large and long-established and there were scores of Honours students to whom an editorial board could look as potential contributors, producers and distributors. At the A.N.U. a similar venture could have seemed positively foolhardy.

Ken Inglis, 1968

This text is taken from ANU Historical Journal II: Number 1, published 2019 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.