

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Australian federal election books are always a demanding enterprise and the editors have many people to thank.

First, and foremost, the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia (ASSA) has been unwavering in its continuing support for this series. We acknowledge the role of long-time director John Beaton (1944–2018). ASSA's generous funding for the 2019 election workshop enabled it to be held at the Museum of Australian Democracy, Old Parliament House, in Canberra. This was facilitated by Mark Evans, Director of Democracy 2025, which is a joint initiative of the Museum of Australian Democracy and the University of Canberra.

The ASSA funding was matched by the School of Politics and International Relations at The Australian National University (ANU) and by the Institute for Governance and Policy Analysis at the University of Canberra. Liliana Oyarzun Silva, Nilima Mathai and Hannah Mills played an invaluable role in the organising of the workshop.

Both authors and discussants at the election workshop contributed to lively discussion of the draft chapters. They helped to identify the key themes emerging from the election and to place them in comparative context.

The discussants included:

- Frank Bongiorno (The Australian National University)
- Patrick Dumont (The Australian National University, smartvote Australia)
- Mark Evans (University of Canberra, Democracy 2025)
- Michelle Grattan (University of Canberra, The Conversation)
- Andrew Hughes (The Australian National University)
- Michael Jensen (University of Canberra)

- Mark Kenny (The Australian National University)
- Damon Muller (Parliamentary Library)
- Rod Tiffen (University of Sydney)

Thanks also to the anonymous reviewers of the manuscript for their thoughtful suggestions, to Jan Borrie for her meticulous copyediting and the ANU Publication Subsidy Committee for their support. Members of the Social Sciences Editorial Board of ANU Press and staff of the press, particularly Emily Tinker, also made valuable contributions. In addition, we would like to thank all those who have given us permission for the reproduction of the photos, cartoons and other images that contribute so much to this book.

Finally, we thank the contributors for their timely submission of revised workshop papers and for their patient responses to our endless queries.
