

TABLES

Table 2.1. Quintile transition matrix between parent and child incomes in the United States . . . . .	26
Table 3.1. Percentage change in capital stocks and inclusive wealth . .	49
Table 4.1. Gini coefficients by region . . . . .	58
Table 5.1. Current levels of income inequality in South-East Asia . . .	89
Table 5.2. Summary of statistics . . . . .	96
Table 5.3. Determinants of the Gini coefficients in South-East Asia . .	98
Table 6.1. People with completed tertiary education as percentage of population aged 25 and over . . . . .	140
Table 6.2. Ease of doing business, infrastructure, legal protection and ease of exporting in selected countries in the Asia–Pacific region. . . . .	140
Table 8.1. Estimates of consumption inequality from NSSO consumption surveys . . . . .	174
Table 8.2. Ratio of average MPCE of some occupation groups to average MPCE of all population . . . . .	177
Table 8.3. Decile-wise wealth share. . . . .	181
Table 8.4. Intergenerational elasticity in earnings and inequality (1958–2009) . . . . .	198
Table 9.1. Macro-economic assumptions . . . . .	220
Table 9.2. Fiscal surplus expected from extended retirement. . . . .	230
Table 10.1. Summary statistics of labour force participation and explanatory variables . . . . .	250

Table 10.2. Summary statistics of labour force participation and explanatory variables over time . . . . .	252
Table 10.3. Summary statistics of labour force participation and individual characteristics by age group. . . . .	254
Table 10.4. Marginal effects of pooled sample . . . . .	255
Table 10.5. FLFP determinants' annual growth in percentage points. . . . .	263
Table 10.A.1. Marginal effects by Java–Bali and the outer islands regions . . . . .	268
Table 10.A.2. Marginal effects by year . . . . .	270
Table 10.A.3. Probit estimation of FLFP for use in the projections . . .	273

This text is taken from Achieving Inclusive Growth in the Asia Pacific, edited by Adam Triggs and Shujiro Urata, published 2020 by ANU Press,
The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.