

ILLUSTRATIONS

Figure 1: Earle Page strikes a pose in early Canberra. Mildenhall Collection, NAA, A3560, 6053, undated.	3
Figure 2: ‘He went about doing good’: Earle Page panel, Page Memorial Window, Wesley and St Aidan’s Uniting Church, Canberra	24
Figure 3: Charles and Annie Page with their family, c. 1890.	28
Figure 4: Page’s beloved Clarence Valley region.	29
Figure 5: Ulrich Ellis	55
Figure 6: Sydney and the North, New State Magazine , June 1923.	83
Figure 7: The new Bruce–Page Ministry at its swearing-in ceremony, 1923	96
Figure 8: Charles Hardy, c. 1931: Regional demagogue pictured in respectable mode	189
Figure 9: Earle Page with Ethel Page on his return to Australia, August 1942	253
Figure 10: Post-war Australia divided into 97 Regional Development Committees, as seen by the Chifley Government	267
Figure 11: Cover of Page’s 1944 booklet, Clarence River Hydro-Electric Gorge Scheme	279
Figure 12: The new Menzies Ministry 1949	294

This text is taken from 'Now is the Psychological Moment': Earle Page and the Imagining of Australia, by Stephen Wilks, published 2020 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.