

BOXES AND TABLES

Table 2.1 Policy domains and agencies of case studies. . . . .	24
Table 3.1 The collective impact framework. . . . .	41
Box 3.1 Excerpt from the SEA Change website . . . . .	49
Box 3.2 Excerpt from the GenR8 Change website . . . . .	50
Table 4.1 Attributes of a person with high CQ. . . . .	68
Table 4.2 Hard and soft skills. . . . .	71
Table 5.1 Summary of interorganisational entity features . . . . .	83
Table 5.2 Key elements of better practice when designing a collaboration framework . . . . .	88
Table 7.1 The collaborative leadership role . . . . .	124
Table 7.2 The art of boundary-spanning. . . . .	128
Table 7.3 Phases of collaboration and collaborative competencies. . .	130
Table 8.1 Engagement strategies. . . . .	145
Table 9.1 Person and place: Policy types . . . . .	163
Table 9.2 Policy and practice guidance on place-based approaches (Australian and international experience) . . . . .	166
Table 10.1 Collaboration between not-for-profits and businesses . . .	192
Table 10.2 Typology of third parties involved in the transition from confrontation to collaboration between businesses and civil society . . . . .	194
Table 10.3 Factors determining government's choice of a governance model . . . . .	196
Table 10.4 A decision-making framework for choosing a collaborative approach. . . . .	197

This text is taken from Collaboration for Impact: Lessons from the Field, by John Butcher and David Gilchrist, published 2020 by ANU Press,
The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.