

Acknowledgements

I am grateful to all the artists and cultural practitioners who gave their precious time and told me what they really think and feel. I thank the artists for the persistence they bring to their creative practices, and the practitioners who have dedicated their careers to the discourse and advancement of multicultural arts in Australia. I hope this book goes some way to acknowledge your work and leaves a trail for others.

I owe a debt of thanks to Professor Greg Noble and Distinguished Professor Ien Ang for their incisive insights. I thank Greg for expanding my horizons and Ien for focusing them. I would especially like to acknowledge Ien for her vision and efforts in establishing the Institute for Culture and Society, which is a wonderfully rigorous, convivial and supportive environment.

I thank my husband, Nigel Helyer, for his remarkable belief in my ability to do this. I am grateful for the incredible energy that he dedicates to his art practice and for keeping the adventures happening over these recent years, whether through walking, kayaking, sailing or installing his ambitious art projects.

This text is taken from Creative Frictions: Arts Leadership, Policy and Practice in Multicultural Australia, by Cecelia Cmielewski, published 2021 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.