

List of figures

Chapter One

Figure 1: Weekly hours spent per media 8

Chapter Two

Figure 2: Citizens' views of government and democracy 22

Figure 3: Traffic to party websites, May–August 2010 31

Figure 4: Politicians' Facebook friends/fans in the 2010 federal election 33

Figure 5: Politicians' Twitter followers in the 2010 federal election 33

Figure 6: Candidates' website functionality in the 2010 federal election 38

Figure 7: Candidates' use of websites, federal elections 2004, 2007, and 2010 38

Figure 8: Candidates' perceptions of channel value in electioneering 2007 39

Figure 9: Candidates' 'points of presence' online in the 2010 federal election 40

Figure 10: Candidates' use of SNSs, elections 2007 and 2010 42

Figure 11: Depth of content in campaign mini-sites in the 2010 federal election 42

Figure 12: Australians' interest in election campaigns 54

Figure 13: AES media research 'Followed the election in the mass media' 55

Figure 14: Source of web browsing of political content 57

Figure 15: Mentions of party leaders in blog posts, May–August 2010 59

Figure 16: Mentions of party leaders in tweets, July–August 2010 60

Chapter Three

Figure 17: Age distribution of social-media survey respondents, compared to N 78

Figure 18: Difference between the political engagement of users of social media 79

Figure 19: Gross household income, users of political social media 81

Figure 20: Highest level of education achieved, users of political social media 82

Figure 21: Political blog users, employment characteristics 85

Figure 22: Discursive transfer: Political-blog users compared with general users	86
Figure 23: Political behaviour of blog users, comparative	87
Figure 24: Political behaviour of Twitter users, comparative	92
Figure 25: Political behaviour of Facebook users	95
Figure 26: Propensity to group membership among social media users	95
Figure 27: Political content on Facebook wallposts, by type	99
Figure 28: Stranger on a train scenario, willingness to talk	102
Figure 29: Policy areas of interest to social media users	103
Chapter Five
Figure 30: Reason for joining CANdo, self-reported	143
Figure 31: CANdo membership, political activity	143
Figure 32: Occupy Sydney participants' levels of political trust, compared with Australian population	150
Chapter Six
Figure 33: Changes in the metro and national newspaper industry, 1901–2011	163
Figure 34: Percentage change in newspaper circulation 1977–2012	163
Figure 35: Online news media source, 2010 election	167