

Acknowledgements

The authors wish to acknowledge the government officials in Australia and New Zealand who generously made time for the interviews on which many of the conclusions in this volume are based. Many of them declined acknowledgement or requested anonymity, so none have been identified individually. The authors are nevertheless grateful to them all.

A large measure of thanks is also due to the Economic Society of Australia (ESA) and the New Zealand Government Economics Network for their assistance in the conduct of the survey of their members. Dr Matthew Butlin (ESA President), Dr Richard Tooth (President, ESA NSW) and Ms Diane Litherland (Administrator, ESA) assisted generously with their time in the process of conducting the survey. Sara Rahman (Australia and New Zealand School of Government) helpfully compiled the survey data.

Particular thanks are due to the Australia and New Zealand School of Government for its grant of research funding as part of its priority research theme of 'cross-jurisdictional policymaking'.

Professor Andrew Podger (Honorary Professor of Public Policy, College of Arts and Social Sciences, The Australian National University) and Dr Richard Tooth provided invaluable comment on a pre-publication manuscript. Sam Vincent helped read and steer the manuscript through the publication process.

While the authors accept responsibility for the contents of this monograph, they are most grateful for the very useful respective contributions of all those involved.

Leo Dobes
Joanne Leung
George Argyrous

This text is taken from Social Cost-Benefit Analysis in Australia and New Zealand: The State of Current Practice and What Needs to be Done, by Leo Dobes, Joanne Leung and George Argyrous, published 2016 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.