CONTRIBUTORS

Hongwei BAO is Associate Professor in Media Studies at the University of Nottingham, United Kingdom. He is the author of Queer China: Lesbian and Gay Literature and Visual Culture under Postsocialism (Routledge, 2020) and co-editor of Queer Literature in the Sinosphere (Bloomsbury, 2024). He has also published the poetry pamphlet Dream of the Orchid Pavilion (Big White Shed Press, 2024) and the poetry collection The Passion of the Rabbit God (Valley Press, 2024).

Jeremy BROWN is a Professor of History at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada. His most recent book is June Fourth: The Tiananmen Protests and Beijing Massacre of 1989 (Cambridge University Press, 2021).

Dan CHEN is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Richmond, Virginia. Her research explores the complex interplay between political power and societal forces in China, focusing on popular culture, public opinion, and news media. She is the author of Convenient Criticism: Local Media and Governance in Urban China (SUNY Press, 2020). She is writing a new book examining Chinese stand-up comedy as a lens into public discourse and societal change.

Yuzong CHEN is a PhD researcher at the Asia Institute at the University of Melbourne. His research interests include water governance, environmental policies, techno-politics, and environmental geography in China.

Yangyang CHENG is a Research Scholar in Law and a Fellow at Yale Law School's Paul Tsai China Center, where her work focuses on the development of science and technology in China and US–China relations. Her essays have appeared in The New York Times, The Guardian, The Nation, MIT Technology Review, and WIRED, and have received several awards from the Society of Publishers in Asia, the Asian American Journalists Association, and the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists. She is a co-host, writer, and producer of the narrative podcast series Dissident at the Doorstep, from Crooked Media. Born and raised in China, Cheng received her PhD in physics from the University of Chicago and her bachelor's degree from the University of Science and Technology of China's School for the Gifted Young. Before joining Yale, she worked on the Large Hadron Collider (LHC) for more than a decade, most recently at Cornell University, and as an LHC Physics Center Distinguished Researcher at Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory.

Kecheng FANG is an Assistant Professor and Director of the MA in Journalism Program at the School of Journalism and Communication, The Chinese University of Hong Kong. His research interests include journalism, political communication, and digital media. He received his PhD from the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania. Before joining academia, he was a journalist at the Chinese newspaper Southern Weekly (南方周末). He received the Early Career Award from the Association for Chinese Communication Studies in 2024.

Susan GREENHALGH is John King and Wilma Cannon Fairbank Professor of Chinese Society emerita at the Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies at Harvard University. An anthropologist and specialist on governance and the state, as well as science, technology, and society, she is author of several books on the One-Child Policy, including Just One Child: Science and Policy in Deng's China (University of California Press, 2008) and Governing China's Population: From Leninist to Neoliberal Biopolitics (co-authored, Stanford University Press, 2005). Her most recent book, on the corporate corruption of science and policy in the United States and China, is Soda Science: Making the World Safe for Coca-Cola (University of Chicago Press, 2024). For more, see susan-greenhalgh.com.

Ling HAN is an Assistant Professor in the Gender Studies Programme at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. She is a sociologist researching the intersections of gender, digital platforms, the meaning of work, and entrepreneurship. She has published about digital feminism and the platformisation of everyday lives. Her current research delves into the impact of digital philanthropy on gender non-profits and the experiences of women in platform work in contemporary Chinese society. She has recently co-edited a special issue of Gender in Management on women's entrepreneurship in China.

Jane HAYWARD is a lecturer in China and Global Affairs at the Lau China Institute, King's College London. She has a PhD from the East Asian Studies Department of New York University. She has held postdoctoral positions at the Oxford University China Centre and the School of Public Policy and Management at Tsinghua University in Beijing, where she worked at the Institute for Contemporary China Studies. She is currently working on her book manuscript, which examines China's agrarian question and related urban transformations.

Yue HOU is a political scientist at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology and a national fellow at Stanford's Hoover Institution. She studies the political economy of China. She is the author of The Private Sector in Public Office: Selective Property Rights in China (Cambridge University Press, 2019).

Luanjiao HU is a Visiting Scholar at the Lurie Institute for Disability Policy, Brandeis University, USA, and the incoming Director of Research at Disability Policy Consortium. She founded an international disability interest network called Disability Without Borders that gathers close to 700 scholars, graduate students, practitioners, and advocates globally who share a common interest in disability inclusion in China and beyond. She is the author of the book Inclusion, Exclusion, Agency, and Advocacy: Experiences of Chinese Women with Physical Disabilities, with Worldwide Implications (Information Age Publishing, 2024).

Tamara JACKA is an Emeritus Professor in the Department of Political and Social Change, College of Asia and the Pacific, The Australian National University. A feminist social anthropologist, her main research interests are in gender, rural–urban migration and social change in contemporary China. She is the author of Rural Women in Urban China: Gender, Migration, and Social Change (M.E. Sharpe, 2006), which won the Francis L.K. Hsu prize for best book in East Asian Anthropology. More recent publications include Women, Gender and Rural Development in China (Edward Elgar, 2011, co-edited with Sally Sargeson) and Contemporary China: Society and Social Change (Cambridge University Press, 2013, co-authored with Andrew B. Kipnis and Sally Sargeson).

Kanishka JAYASURIYA is a Professor of Politics and International Studies at Murdoch University, Australia. He has worked extensively on issues of regulation, rule of law, and regional governance in Asia. His most recent work explores the democracy crisis and rise of right-wing politics and authoritarian populism, particularly the politics and crises of social reproduction.

Andrew B. KIPNIS is Professor of Anthropology at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. He is the author of six books, the most recent of which is The Funeral of Mr Wang (University of California Press, 2021). He has been editor of two journals: The China Journal and HAU: Journal of Ethnographic Theory.

James LEIBOLD is a Professor of Politics and Asian Studies in the Department of Politics, Media, and Philosophy at La Trobe University in Australia. His research explores the politics of ethnicity, race, and national identity in modern China, with a current focus on colonial-style nation-building projects in the borderlands of contemporary China.

Hangwei LI is a senior researcher at the German Institute of Development and Sustainability (IDOS) and an Associate at the Megatrends Afrika project. She received her PhD from SOAS, University of London, and previously worked as an associate professor at China Agricultural University. Hangwei's research lies in the fields of politics, international development, and political communication, with a particular focus on China's multifaceted engagement with Africa.

LI Jun, also known as Li Sipan (李思磐), is a visiting scholar at Stanford University. Previously, she was a renowned investigative journalist and columnist with China's Southern Media Group. In 2017, she earned her PhD in Political Sociology from the University of Macau, with a dissertation titled 'Social Movement, Media, and the State: The New Feminist Movement with Communication as Core in Contemporary China (2003–2016)'. Li is the founder of the influential feminist nongovernmental organisation Women Awakening Network (新媒体女性网络, also known as New Media Women).

Mengyao LI is a PhD researcher in Human Geography at the University of Melbourne and the University of Manchester. Her research areas are environmental governance, political ecology, and feminist geography in China.

Ruoxi LIU is a sociologist focusing on individual agency, grassroots creativity, and everyday activism under restricted social and political contexts. She is now a departmental lecturer at the School of Global and Area Studies, the University of Oxford. Her research investigates self-employed/independent workers, cultural workers/artists, craft workers, and their communities in contemporary China. Inspired by people in her field, their alternative practices, and different forms of activism, she has been practising bridging academia and activism.

Loretta Ieng-tak LOU is an Assistant Professor of Anthropology and Degree Director of the MSc in Global & Planetary Health at Durham University. Her research explores the intersections of environment, well-being, healing, and social movements. She is currently writing her first book on green living and embodied environmentalism in postcolonial Hong Kong.

Nicholas LOUBERE is an Associate Professor at the Centre for East and South-East Asian Studies, Lund University and the co-editor of the Made in China Journal. His current research examines informal patterns and processes of Chinese globalisation, focusing on Chinese participation in resource extraction booms from the nineteenth-century gold rushes to the current phenomenon of cryptocurrency mining. He is the author of Development on Loan: Microcredit and Marginalisation in Rural China (Amsterdam University Press, 2019) and the co-author of Global China as Method (Cambridge University Press, 2022).

Zachary LOWELL is a PhD researcher at the University of Melbourne. His research focuses on China–Africa development cooperation and people-to-people exchange.

Florence MOK is a Nanyang Assistant Professor of History at Nanyang Technological University (NTU), Singapore. She is a historian of colonial Hong Kong and modern China, with an interest in environmental history, the Cold War and state–society relations. She is also the founder of Hong Kong Research Hub at NTU and an Executive Board member of the Society for Hong Kong Studies.

MURONG Xuecun burst on the literary scene with the novel Leave Me Alone: A Novel of Chengdu (Allen & Unwin, 2009)—originally serialised on a company bulletin board and later long-listed for the Man Asian Literary Prize in 2008. Since then, he has written seven books, both fiction and non-fiction. Murong was a prolific Chinese blogger commenting on current affairs with millions of followers until the events described in this essay. His account of lockdowns in Wuhan, Deadly Quiet City: Stories from Wuhan, COVID Ground Zero, was first published in 2022 by Hardie Grant in Australia, where he now resides. He was an op-ed contributor for *The New York Time*s and continues to write essays and fiction.

PANG Laikwan is Choh-Ming Li Professor of Cultural Studies and head of the Department of Cultural and Religious Studies at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. Her research spans a broad spectrum of issues related to culture in modern and contemporary China and Hong Kong. Her latest books are One and All: The Logic of Chinese Sovereignty (Stanford University Press, 2024), The Appearing Demos: Hong Kong During and After the Umbrella Movement (University of Michigan Press, 2020), and The Art of Cloning: Creative Production During China's Cultural Revolution (Verso Books, 2017).

Altman Yuzhu PENG is an Associate Professor in the Department of Applied Linguistics and program director of the MSc in Intercultural Communication for Business and the Professions at the University of Warwick. He earned his PhD from Newcastle University, United Kingdom. His research interests lie at the intersections of critical discourse studies, feminism, media and cultural studies, and masculinity studies.

Andrea E. PIA is Assistant Professor in Anthropology at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He is the author of Cutting the Massline: Water, Politics, and Climate in Southwest China (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2024), the co-editor of China as Context: Anthropology, Post-globalisation and the Neglect of China (Manchester University Press, forthcoming in 2025) and the translator of the Italian edition of 中国人类学史 (Renmin University Press, 2008). His essays have appeared in the Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, Cultural Anthropology, and the Journal of Political Ecology, among others. He is the creator of the interactive digital ethnography The Long Day of the Young Peng.

Christian SORACE is a Lecturer of Global China at the University of Cambridge. He is the author of Shaken Authority: China's Communist Party and the 2008 Sichuan Earthquake (Cornell University Press, 2017) and the co-editor of Afterlives of Chinese Communism: Political Concepts from Mao to Xi (ANU Press and Verso Books, 2019) and Proletarian China: One Century of Chinese Labour (Verso Books, 2022). He is currently conducting research on the urbanisation of the grasslands in Inner Mongolia, China, and ger districts in Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia.

Giorgio STRAFELLA (PhD, University of Nottingham) is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Asian Studies and a researcher at the Sinophone Research Centre, Faculty of Arts, Palacký University Olomouc, Czech Republic.

Anna TING is a master's student at the Centre for East and South-East Asian Studies, Lund University, Sweden. Her research focuses on Hong Kong's colonial history, with a particular interest in processes of identity formation and the impact of colonial legacies in modern-day Hong Kong.

T.S. is an anonymous scholar studying minority governance and identity politics in China.

Maghiel VAN CREVEL is Professor of Chinese Language and Literature at Leiden University and a specialist in contemporary poetry. His research highlights the synergy of textual criticism with ethnographic fieldwork. His current book project is on China's battler poetry (打工诗歌). At Leiden University Libraries, he has built a collection of unofficial poetry from China that is freely accessible online.

Tucker WANG-HAI is a PhD candidate in communication and a research fellow at the Center for Journalism, Media, and Democracy at the University of Washington. His research focuses on international journalism, digital news production, Chinese foreign-aimed media, and Chinese soft power (particularly in Southeast Asia). He was a visiting scholar at the Thai–Chinese Strategic Research Center, National Research Council of Thailand, in the spring of 2023.

Trissia WIJAYA is a McKenzie Fellow at the University of Melbourne. She is also an affiliate of the Second Cold War Observatory and an Honorary Research Fellow at the Indo-Pacific Research Centre at Murdoch University, Australia. Her research focuses on the political economy of energy transitions, China in Southeast Asia, and state capitalism. Her writing can be found in Environmental Politics, New Political Economy, and International Affairs, among other publications.

Vivian WU is an award-winning journalist, media entrepreneur, and the founder and CEO of Dasheng Media, an independent platform dedicated to high-quality, in-depth journalism on China and the Chinese diaspora. With more than 20 years of experience, she has reported for the BBC, Initium Media, and South China Morning Post, covering politics, law, and media. As the BBC's Hong Kong bureau chief, she led digital expansion and investigative coverage. Her work has earned Society of Publishers in Asia and Hong Kong Human Rights awards. Holding degrees from the New School and Peking University, she remains committed to championing independent media and amplifying underrepresented voices.

Binghuang XU is a curator, writer, and researcher based in China. Her practice focuses on ecological and socially engaged art through transdisciplinary collaboration. She co-runs Making Space, an independent art space in Guangzhou. In recent years, she has curated several projects that critically engage with overlooked places, dialects, alternative education, and folk history. She was the recipient of the Fellows Award for Cultural & Artistic Responses to the Environmental Crisis by the Prince Claus Fund, and the Connections Through Culture grant by the British Council.

Zhangluyuan Charlie YANG is a recent graduate in Social Anthropology from the University of Oxford. Her research focuses on the Chinese family, marriage, feminist movements, and urban–rural disparities. In her most recent fieldwork, she examined gender dynamics surrounding bride price and dowry in urban China, alongside the history of uxorilocal marriage.

This text is taken from Made in China Journal: Volume 9, Issue 2, 2024, edited by Ivan Franceschini and Nicholas Loubere, published 2025 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.