

List of illustrations

Map 1: The location of contemporary Papua New Guinea in relation to its closest neighbours.	xix
Map 2: The boundaries of the provinces of modern Papua New Guinea	xix
Map 3: The principal places in the Admiralty Islands involved in the events in 1953–54 as discussed in the text	xx
Figure 1.1: Schwartz films while Mead takes notes, 1953	3
Figure 1.2: Schwartz and Paliau in Lorengau, late 1980s	9
Figure 3.1: In Pere village in 1928, houses and other structures were built on pilings over natural or artificial lagoons. People moved around the village by canoe	62
Figure 3.2: Pere village men, photographed in 1928	66
Figure 6.1: The routes of those who first conveyed from place to place news of Wapei's prophecies and the alleged deliveries of cargo already accomplished	177
Figure 7.1: The Baluan United Christian Church in Lipan-Mok village, Baluan Island, 1953	226
Figure 7.2: Paliau greeting a young admirer	235
Figure 8.1: The procession to the old Bunai cemetery that Tjamilo organised in December 1953 to re-inter the remains of Cemetery Cult adherents' deceased kin	252
Figure 9.1: Pita Tapo became a strong advocate of the Cemetery Cult in Lahan, an Usiai hamlet of Bunai	297
Figure 9.2: The gate to the graveyard Tjamilo and his followers built in Bunai in 1954	302

Figure 11.1: Paliau looked thoughtful before the meeting in Bunai at which he ended the Cemetery Cult 337

Figure 12.1: In 1970, Paliau spoke at a conference on the anthropology of the Bismarck Archipelago at the University of California, Santa Cruz 372

Figure 13.1: In 1973, Paliau surprised Schwartz by dancing in full traditional regalia at an event in Lipan-Mok village, Baluan 386

Figure 13.2: In the 1980s, Wind Nation began producing written documents bearing the elaborate but inexpertly drawn Wind Nation logo 414

Figure 14.1: The Wind Nation meeting house in the centre of Pere village, 2015 429

Figure 14.2: Paliau’s grave in Lipan-Mok village, Baluan Island, 2015 441

Figure 14.3: In 2015, Smith visited Paliau’s house in Lipan-Mok
village, Baluan Island, with (from left to right) Kumulau Paniu, Lady Teresia Maloat (Paliau’s widow), and Kisokau
Pochapon 442

Figure 14.4: The shrine to Paliau in the room in which he died, 2015 443

Figure 14.5: Paliau explaining Wing, Wang, and Wong to Schwartz in the late 1980s. 444

Figure 14.6: This page of the plan for Freedom House shows
double doors on opposite sides of the octagon 445

Figure 15.1: An image of the Wind Nation logo is carved on one of the posts of Margaret Mead’s Resource Center in Pere village, shown here in 2015 452

This text is taken from Like Fire: The Paliau Movement and Millenarianism in Melanesia, by Theodore Schwartz and Michael French Smith, published 2021 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.