Alan Chan, 'Laozi', Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy, Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 2018, online at: <https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/laozi/#DatAutLao>.
3. Leonard, 'How Taiwan's unlikely digital minister hacked the pandemic'. The quotation is from chapter 11 of the Dao De Jing: 埴埴以為器，當其无，有器之用. Both in translation and in its various early recensions, this verse is subject to considerable variation. The Dao De Jing text quoted here comes from Zhu Qianzhi 朱謙之, Laozi Jiaoshi 老子校釋, Beijing: Zhonghua Shuju, 2000. I have made minor changes in punctuation.
4. Zhu, Laozi Jiaoshi, 37.146, with a close variant on 48.193. This and the following translations are mine unless otherwise noted.
5. A special issue of the Journal of Chinese Philosophy was devoted to the question of whether political Daoism is an anarchistic theory; for a strong affirmative position, see, for example, John Clark, 'On Taoism and Politics', Journal of Chinese Philosophy, vol.10, no.1 (1983): 65–88; and, more recently, see John Rapp, Daoism and Anarchism: Critiques of State Autonomy in Ancient and Modern China, London: Continuum International Publishing Group, 2012. For a direct rebuttal, see Alex Feldt, 'Governing Through the Dao: A Non-Anarchistic Interpretation of the Laozi', Dao: A Journal of Comparative Philosophy, vol.9, no.3 (2010): 323–337. An intriguingly nuanced position is offered by Sarah Flavel and Brad Hall, 'State Maternalism: Rethinking Anarchist Readings of the Daodejing', Dao: A Journal of Comparative Philosophy, vol.19, no.3 (2020): pp.353–369.

13. Zhu, Laozi Jiaoshi, 5.22-23 suggests this interpretation of the object in question. See also David Hall and Roger Ames, Dao De Jing: A Philosophical Translation, New York: Ballantine Books, 2003, p.206. This is a standard modern reading, but some medieval commentators interpreted the term instead as 'grass and dogs' (i.e., food-stuffs), which would make the meaning of the verse somewhat darker; see discussion in
