

Acknowledgements

I am deeply grateful to former Department of Foreign Affairs colleagues who encouraged me in this enterprise, Lyndall MacLean and Michelle Chan. I appreciate the helpful comments and advice from Canberra friends and colleagues, Nicholas Farrelly, Morten Pedersen, and Andrew Selth, each of whom is a world-class expert on Myanmar. I could not have succeeded without the patient and wise support of ANU Press Asian Studies Editorial Committee chair Craig Reynolds. And most of all I received enormous support at the time of my assignment in Myanmar, and in the finalisation of this manuscript, from my wife and partner, Christine.

This text is taken from Eyewitness to Early Reform in Myanmar, by Trevor Wilson, published 2016 by ANU Press, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.